
Original edition 1905

Chapter IV. The Cabinet Circles of Presidents Pierce and Buchanan. Washington in 1856 — Secret Visit of President Pierce — Personal Recollections of Him — Secretaries Marcy, Cushing, and Dobbin — Incidents of the Latter's Kindness of Heart — Secretary of War Jefferson Davis — Postmaster- General Brown — Secretary of State Guthrie — Story of the Conquest of Chevalier Bertinatti ..... 58

Chapter V. Solons of the Capital. Society of Supreme Court Circles — Chief Justice Taney — Judge Campbell — Professors Henry and Maury — A Visit to the Latter's Observatory — Thomas Hart Benton — George Wallace Jones: His Romantic History as Surveyor-General of the Great Northwest. At the Age of Ninety- one He Recalls a Day When He Meant to Kill Seward — Meeting with Myra Clarke Gaines — Senator and Mrs. Crittenden, a "Perfectly Happy Woman" ... 73

Chapter VI. Fashions of the Fifties. Aspect of Fashionable Society of the Pierce and Buchanan Administrations — Perditas of the Period — Low Necks and Lace Berthas — Kind Offices of American Consuls — Mr. Thomson and Miss Lane's Toy Terrier — He Reports Upon the Petticoats at Brighton — -Washington Dressmakers as Miracle- Workers — Mrs. Rich, a True Reconstructionist — Belles and Beaux of the Period — Barton Key — His Murder — Mrs. Sickles at Home — Revival of Moustaches — General Sam Houston ; His Strange Attire — A Glimpse of This Hero in the Senate and in Society .......... 86

Chapter VIII. The Brilliant Buchanan Administration. Miss Lane Becomes Lady of the White House — Her Influence on Washington Life — The Coming of Lord and Lady Napier — Their Hospitality — They Give a Ball to Lords Cavendish and Ashley — Mrs. Crittenden Puts to Rout a Younger Belle — Lord Napier Proposes a Toast to the Chevalier Bayard — Washington Citizens Give a Ball to the Napiers, at Which James Gordon Bennett Is Seen in the Dance — Some Prominent Citizen Hostesses — Lilly Price, the Future Duchess of Marlborough — Mr. W. W. Corcoran — His Lavish Entertainments — Howell Cobb's Appreciation — A Stranger's Lack of It — I Take the Daughter of a Constituent to See the Capitol . . . . . 114

Chapter IX. A Celebrated Social Event. Mrs. Gwin's Fancy Ball — To the White House for Inspection — Aunt Ruthy Partington Presents Herself to Mrs. Gwin — Mrs. Pendleton is Mystified — Senator Gwin and "My Boy Ike" — Lord and Lady Napier and Others of "Our Furrin Relations" — The Squelching of a Brave Baltimorean — Senator Seward Gives Welcome to the Stranger from Beanville — Mr. Shillaber Offers "to Immortalise" Me 126

Chapter X. Exodus of Southern Society FROM THE Federal City. Gayety Begins to Wane in the Capital — A Wedding in Old St. John's — Lord Lyons Replaces the Napiers — Anson Burlingame Rescues Me from a Dilemma — Political Climax — Scenes in the Senate — Admiral Semmes Declares His Intentions — Mr. Ruffin's Menacing Arsenal — Ex-President Tyler's Grief — We Hear News from Morris Island — Senators Clay, Davis, Fitzpatrick, Mallory, and Yulee Withdraw from the Senate — Visits of Representatives Pendleton and Vallandigham, and Senator Pugh, of Ohio — ^Joseph Holt Writes Deploring the Possible Loss to Our Country of Senator Clay's "Genius and Patriotism" — "A Plain New Hampshire Minister" Writes of the Times — We Leave the Federal City — Mrs. Philip Phillips Describes It a Few Weeks Later — Blair's Alarm at Loss of Lee, Magruder, and Other "Good Officers" . . . 138

Chapter XI. War Is Proclaimed. I Go with Senator Clay to Minnesota — "Let's Mob the Fire-eater" — We See Our First Federal Soldiers at Cairo — Echoes of Sumter — Once More in the Blossomy South — In Picturesque Huntsville — We Hear from Montgomery of President Davis's Unceasing Industry — A Survey of Huntsville — The "Plebs" and Aristocrats Compete for the Naming of the Town, and the Descendants of a Poet Give Way before Its Discoverer — A Nursing Mother of Alabama's Great Men — The Fascinations of the Fair Vixens of the Early Nineteenth Century — A Baptism at the Big Spring — The Make-up of Our Army in '61 — We Hear from a Hero at Harper's Ferry — Letters from Washington — We Prepare to Go to Richmond . . . . . -153

Chapter XII. Richmond as a National Capital. We Arrive in Richmond, Where We Meet Many Old Friends — An Evening at the Mallory's' — We Establish Our Mess at Mrs. Du Val's — Some of Our Heroes — We Feast on Oysters and Terrapin — Greenbacks, Canvas-backs, and Drawbacks — We Hear of the Fall of Nashville, and General Buell's Designs Upon Huntsville — Some of Richmond's Hostesses — Mrs. Stannard entertains; and the Famous Private Theatrical Performance of "The Rivals" — Mrs. Burton Harrison Recalls Her Triumph as Lydia Gives an Opinion on Confederate Money — An Exodus from the Capital — Mrs. Roger A.
Pryor Rebukes a Contemptuous Lady — Our Mail a Pandora's Box — News of New Orleans —
William L. Yancey Returns from a Fruitless Trip to England — And Mr. Lamar from Russia —
An Astronomer Turns Martinet — A Careful Search Is Made for General Pope Walker — Our Pastor's Prayers Curtailed — The Federals Are Worried by General Roddy — Miss Mitchell
"Confiscates" Some of My Property — "Hey! Git off 'Ginie Clay's Mare!" — General Logan, a Case of Mistaken Identity — My Refugee Days Begin — A Glimpse of North Carolinian
Hospitality — And of the Battle of Seven Pines — The Seed-corn of Our Race Is Taken —
Return to Huntsville . 178

Chapter XIV. Refugee Days in Georgia. Detained in Macon — General Tracy Tells of Conditions at Vicksburg — Senator Clay Writes of Grave Conditions in Richmond — A Wartime Dinner with President Davis — My Sister and I Turn Seamstresses — Looking for Big Battles — Travel in '63 — Cliff and Sid Lanier Write from "Tented Field" — News from
"Homosas" . . . 193

Chapter XV. Clement C. Clay, Jr., Departs for Canada. A Memory of Dahlgren's Raid — Mr.
Clay Accepts a Mission to Canada — Mr. Lamar's Ideas on National Friendships — My Husband Takes His Departure — Troubled Peters burg and Still More Troubled Richmond —
Hospital Experiences — My Sister Accuses Me of "Running from Yankees," and Overtakes Me —
We Nurse a Sick Soldier — I Get a Passport, but Fail to Use It--A Distinguished Watermelon
Man ...'........ 203

Chapter XVI. The South's Departed Glories. A Typical Plantation — Senator Hammond's Little Republic on Beech Island — Its General Influence — The Mill and the Miller — My Cous in, Mrs. Paul Hammond, Writes a Description of "Redcliffe" — The Hammond Negro as I Have Found Him — She Wins Them by Subterfuge — Senator Clay Dances a Highland Fling and Startles Some Gentle Methodists — St. Catharine's; a Solemn Service There — A Sight for Abolitionists — Choristers of the Field — A Comparison 211

Chapter XVII. Conditions in '63 and '64. Cost of Clothing — Scarcity of Necessities —
Memphis in Yankee Hands — Revival of Spinning and Weaving — A Salt Famine — Senator
Hammond's Sagacity — Potato Coffee and Peanut Chocolate — Mrs. Redd Weaves Me a Notable Dress — London Takes Note of Richmond Fashions — I Send a List of "Desirables" to Mr. Clay in Canada — Novelties for the Toilette and Writing-Table — Difficulties of Getting News — The President Writes Me of My Absent One, and Secretary Mallory Rejoices at His Conduct of Canadian Interest — Postal Deficiencies — Adventures of an Editor — Price of Candles Rises — Telegrams Become Costly and My Sister Protests — " Redcliffe" Mourns
Her Master — Gloom and Apprehension at News of Sherman's March — We Are Visited by Two of Wheeler's Brigade — They Give Us Warning and the Family Silver Is Solemnly Sunk in the Ground — I Hear a Story of Sherman and Wheeler ........222

Chapter XVIII. The Death of Mr. Lincoln. Conflicting Advice Reaches Me from the Capital —
Also Sad News from Huntsville — Our Brother Tells of Political Opposition to the President —
Soldiers and Citizens Desire the Presence of General Johnston in the Tennessee — Mr. Clay Communicates with Me by "Personals" — I Beg to Be Sent to Canada, but am Met by Opposition — The President Bids Me Take Refuge in the Capital — But Another Urges
Me to Leave the Line of Sherman's Army — I Place Myself Under General Howell Cobb's Protection and Go to Macon — My Husband Runs the Blockade, but Is Shipwrecked Off Fort Moultrie — After Some Adventures He Reaches Macon — At the Home of General Toombs — We Hear News from Richmond — Mr. Clay Makes for the Capital and Reaches It — He Returns to Georgia — The Death of Mr. Lincoln: "The Worst Blow Yet Struck at the South!" . 235

Chapter XIX. C. C. Clay, Jr., Surrenders to General Wilson. We Go to Lagrange — A Nest of "Rebels" — We Hear of President Johnson's Proclamation Concerning Mr. Clay — My Husband Resolves to Surrender — He Telegraphs to General Wilson — We Proceed to Atlanta — Courtesy of Colonel Eggleston — He Gives Us a Guard — On to Macon — "Madam, Your Chief Is Taken" — Arrival at Macon — General Wilson Relieves Us of Our Guard — The Generosity of Women Friends — We Drive to Station — And See a Pathetic Cortege — "Say, Johnny Reb, We've Got Your President!" 246

Chapter XX. Prisoners of the United States. We Have an All-Night Ride to Augusta — Our Party of Prisoners Augments — I Am Made Responsible for My Husband's Appearance and We Go Visiting — We Return to Captivity — I Board the Boat Somewhat Hastily — And Unexpectedly Find Myself in the Arms of General Wheeler — He Gives Me a Lesson in Forbearance — A Dismal Voyage — We Reach Savannah and Are Transferred to the Clyde — Extracts from My Diary — Mr. Davis's Stoicism — We Anchor Off Fortress Monroe — Mr. Clay Is Invited "to Take a Ride in a Tug" — Pathetic Separation of the Davis Family — Little Jeff Becomes Our Champion — We See a Gay Shallop Approaching — Two Ladies Appear and Search Us in the Name of the United States Government — A Serio-comic Encounter — And Still Another in Which "Mrs. Clay Lost Her Temper and Counsellest Resistance!" — We Undertake to Deceive Lieutenant Hudson, but "Laugh on the Other Side" of Our Faces! 258

Chapter XXI. Return from Fortress Monroe. On Board the Clyde — I Find a Guard at My Door — An Unknown Hands Me the Daily Papers — The News — I Write to Thirteen Distinguished Men — To Joseph Holt — A Friendly Soldier Posts My Letters — We Arrive in Savannah and Make Our Way to the Pulaski House — Savannah's Generous People — Soldiers, Black and White — The Chaining of Mr. Davis — I Write to General Miles — Little Jeff Makes a Friend — "Bully for Jeff" — "Mordecai and Haman" .......... 269

Chapter XXIII. News from Fortress Monroe. We Hear Discouraging News of the Nation's Prisoners — Denunciation of Joseph Holt and His Witnesses by the Reverend Stuart Robinson — He Exposes the "Infamous Perjuries of the Bureau of Military Justice" — Their Confession and Flight from the Country — Charles O'Conor Writes Me; Also Ben Wood, Who Offers to Advance the Cost of Mr. Clay's Defense; Also Judge Black Writes Cheeringly — I Hear Through R. J. Haldeman of the Friendliness of Thaddeus Stevens; and from General Miles; Also, in Time, from Mr. Clay — His Letter Prophesies Future Racial Conditions, and Advises Me How to Escape the Evils to Come — Freed from Espionage, He Describes the "Comforts" of Life in Fortress Monroe — One of the Tortures of the Inquisition Revived . . . 286
Chapter XXIV. Once More in the Federal Capital. Communications Are Reopened with Washington — Duff Green Makes Application to the President on My Behalf — I Hear from Mrs. Davis of Her Misfortunes — I Borrow $100 and Start for the Capital — Scenes on Cars and Boat — I Meet Many Sympathizers — And Arrive at Last at Cincinnati — Yankee Ideas and Yankee Notions — Mrs. Pugh Visits Me — Also Senator and Mrs. Pendleton, Who Take Me Home — Once More en Route for Washington — Within Its Precincts . . . . . .300

Chapter XXV. Secretary Stanton Denies Responsibility. Arrival at Willard's — Expecting Enemies, I Find Many Old Friends — General Ihrie, of Grant's Staff, Calls On Me — Also a Nameless Lady — Judge Hughes and Judge Black Counsel Me — I Visit the White House to Plead with Mr. Johnson — Mrs. Douglas Is My Companion — Mr. Johnson "Lives up to His Reputation" and Tells Me to See Mr. Stanton — Which I Do — The Secretary's Manner — "I am Not Your Husband's Judge, Neither am I His Accuser" — I Call Upon General Grant, Who Writes to President Johnson on Behalf of Mr. Clay . . .307

Chapter XXVI. Mr. Holt Reports upon the Case of C. C. Clay, Jr. I Send General Grant's Letter to Mr. Johnson — And Beg to Be Allowed to Visit Fortress Monroe — I Begin to Feel the Strength of a Concealed Enemy — I Refuse to Go to Mr. Stanton, and Have a First Pass-at-Arms with the President — Mr. Holt Presents His "Report on the Case of C. C. Clay, Jr." — His Several Opinions of Mr. Clay in Parallel — Denied an Examination of the Infamous Document by the War Department, the President's "Official Copy" Is Placed at My Disposal — Some of Its Remarkable Features — The President Promises Me He Will Not Deliver My Husband and Mr. Davis up to the Military Court, and Agrees to Issue on His Own Responsibility a Permit to Visit Fortress Monroe — I Go to New York and Hobnob with "An Old Abolitionist" . . . • 317

Chapter XXVII. President Johnson Interposes. President Johnson Issues a Permit on His Own Responsibility — I Leave Washington for Fortress Monroe — And Meet with Kindness on the Way — Dr. Craven Admonishes Me to Look for No Favours from His Successor — I Meet General Miles in His Headquaters, Which Have Been Furnished by General Butler — I Experience a Weary Delay — Am Refused Explanation or Use of Telegraph Wires — Dr. Vogell Intercedes — At Nightfall I Am Taken to My Husband's Cell — I Return to the Capital — Death of Mrs. C. C. Clay, Sr. — I Report to the President the Incidents of My Visit to the Fortress — He Assures Me They Shall Not Be Repeated — He Issues Another Permit and Promises to Read a Letter in His Cabinet . . . . . .331

Chapter XXVIII. The Prison. Again at the Fortress — My Husband's Cell and Room in Carroll Hall — Some of the Comforts of Fortress Monroe and of Mr. Clay's Position — I am Told of Some of His Experiences — A Statement of Others — Mr. Davis at the Fortress — An Exchange of Notes — My Husband Turns Caretaker — With a Soft Answer He Turns Away a Soldier's Wrath — I Have a Curious Adventure in Which I Meet a Lamb in Wolf's Clothing .... 345

Chapter XXIX. President Johnson Hears What "the People Say." President Johnson Is Kind but Vacillating — Straws That Show a Veering of the Wind — Colonel Rhett Talks with Mr. Bennett, and the Herald Grows Curious as to the Mysteriously Detained Prisoners — Thaddeus Stevens Writes to Mr. Johnson on Behalf of Mr. Clay — I Have a Nicodemus-like Visitor — Mr. Wilson, Vice-President of the United States, Writes to the President on Mr. Clay's Behalf — Signs of Political Disquiet — Parties and Partisans — I Receive Some Political Advice and Determine to Act Upon It — I Have a rencontre in the Corridors of the White House — And Tell Mr. Johnson What "the People Say" 354

Chapter XXX. The Government Yields Its
Prisoner. Old Friends and New — Mme. Le Vert and Other Famous Personages Return to the Capital — General Lee is Lionized — I Secure the Liberty of the Fort for My Husband, and Indulge in a Little Recreation — I Visit the Studio of Vinnie Ream and the Confederate Fair at Baltimore — I Return to Washington and Resume My Pleadings with the President — Mr. Mallory, Admiral Semmes, and Alexander Stephens Are Released — Mr. Mallory and Judge Black Counsel Me to Take Out the Writ of Habeas Corpus — The Release Papers Are Promised — I Visit the Executive Mansion to Claim Them and at Last Receive Them — ”You Are Released!” — Congratulations Are Offered — The Context of Some of These— ”God Has Decreed That No Lie Shall Live Forever” — -We Turn Our Faces Once More to the Purple Mountains of Alabama ...... 367