

Davis, Varina. Jefferson Davis, Ex-President of the Confederate States of America; A Memoir by His Wife. 2 vols. New York: Belford Company, 1890.

Vol. 1 deals with Davis's life up to his withdrawal from the Senate

Vol. 2

Chapter I From Washington to Mississippi 1 The Task of Relating her Husband's Life in the Confederacy — One of the most Benevolent and Patriotic of Men — His Withdrawal from the Senate — Arrival at the Crutchfield House, Chattanooga, i-6 ; Met by Governor and State Authorities on Reaching Mississippi — Appointed to Command of a State Army, with rank of Major-General, on arriving at Jackson — Troops to be Raised — Had the Southern States Possessed Arsenals — He did not Understand Politics, but Understood the Art of War, 6-12.

CHAPTER II. Election AS President 13 The Convention of the Seceding States — The Constitution Modelled on that of the United States — The African Slave Trade Forbidden — Expenditure of Public Money, 13-15 ; No State to Levy Duties without Consent of Congress, Except on Sea-going Vessels — The Terms of President and Vice-President — Notice of Election to the Presidency of the Confederate States — Alexander H. Stephens, Vice-President, 15-19.

CHAPTER III Mr. Davis Continues His Narrative 20 On the Way to Montgomery, Made Brief Addresses — Judge Sharkey — False Reports — Assumed Office of President, February 18, 1861 — Inaugural Address — First Letter Written from Montgomery, Ala., February 20th, 20-33.

CHAPTER IV. Going to Montgomery — Appointment of the Cabinet 34 Closing up Dwelling and Abandoning Library with Reluctance, and the Old Flag with Sorrow — Montgomery Swarming with Applicants for Commissions — Correspondent of the London Times — Members of the Cabinet — Provisional Government's Recommendation — President Went to his Office before Nine, came Home at Six — Every Change in the Constitution of the old Government Jealously avoided, 34-40.

CHAPTER V. The Office was not Sought 41 Mr. Davis never Intrigued — Wrong Impressions in Relation to him Refuted by Hon. J. A. P. Campbell, of Mississippi, afterward Justice of the Supreme Court of that State — Who should be President ? — The Claims of no one else were Considered or even Alluded to — Mr. Davis Came to be the Commander-in-chief of a Country not yet Torn Loose from the Memories of a Common Glory — He Longed to Stretch forth his Hand to the North before Blood was Spilt, 41-47.

CHAPTER VI. Peace Propositions 48 The Provisional Congress before the Arrival of Mr. Davis — The Free Navigation of the Mississippi — Peace Commissioners — Mr. Z. Chandler — Marshalling the States — A Plan Agreed upon by the Majority — Lincoln — Great Meeting in New York, 1861 — Views of Leading Newspapers — Slavery in the Territories — Confederate Commissioners Sent to Washington, 47-57 ; The Crooked Path of Diplomacy — Preparations made in New York and other Northern Ports for a Military and Naval Expedition — Major Anderson's Letter — The Count of Paris Libels Memory of Major Anderson — Vessels Designed for Relief of Fort Sumter — Failure of the Manoeuvre, 57-64.

CHAPTER VII Preparations for War 65 Officers of the Confederate Army — Captain Semmes Sent to Buy Guns — A Musket from the Tower of London — Appropriations for the Navy — Mr. Seward's Views Expressed to Mr. Dayton, Minister to France — President of the Confederacy Calls Congress Together, April 29th — President Lincoln Calls out Seventy-five Thousand Men — Manufactory of Arms and Powder — Population of the United States — The North Had all the Advantages — If the South had Arms, Whole Population would have been Enrolled — Seat of Government Removed from Montgomery to Richmond, Va. — Spotswood Hotel — Guests of the City, 65-76.

CHAPTER VIII. The Bombardment of Sumter 77 March 3d, General Beauregard, Commander of All the Confederate Forces — The Federal Fleet — Hostilities Commenced — Forts Moultrie, Sumter, and Johnston — Surrender of Fort Sumter — Cheered by Confederates for its Gallant Resistance — Maryland Overrun with Troops, 76, 81 ; April 19, 1861, a Body of Union Troops Fired upon Unarmed Citizens at Railway Depot — The Relay House, at the Junction of Washington & Baltimore Railways, Occupied by Federals, May 5th — General Butler Moved to Baltimore and Occupied Federal Hill — A Demand for the Surrender of Arms — Provost-marshal Makes Arrests — Members of the Legislature at Frederick Arrested — Citizens Conveyed to Fortress Monroe and Imprisoned while Sick, without Blankets or Pillows, 81-85. CHAPTER IX. The President Arrives in Richmond 86 On Arrival at Richmond Found General Lee in Command of Army of Virginia — General Johnston at Harper's Ferry — General Beauregard at Manassas — Generals Huger and Magruder at Norfolk — Official Letter to General Johnston, who Desires to Retire from his Post so as to Check the Advance of General Patterson — Two First Encounters of the Northern and Southern Troops, June ii, 1861, at Bethel Church; June 18th, at Bridge on Baltimore & Ohio Railroad — A Disaster to the Confederate Arms — General Garnett Killed — Great Activity and Commotion among the Confederates — Official Correspondence, 86-91.

CHAPTER X. Engagement at Bull Run, and Battle of Manassas 92 July 21 St, Cannonade Opened by the enemy — The Battle Raged with Varied Success — Around the House of Mrs. Henry was Fiercest — Reports that the Field was Lost to the Confederates — Some of the Confederates Suffering from Hunger — Signs of an Utter Rout of the Enemy — The Cry, " On to Richmond," changed to " Off for Washington" — Caring for the Wounded — Confederate Victory Complete at All Points — Flight of the Enemy — The Army under McDowell, 34,127 Present for Duty — The Confederate Force Numbered 13,000 only, 92-101.

CHAPTER XI. Conferences after the Battle of Manassas 102 An Order to Pursue the Enemy — Correspondence Regarding the Failure to Pursue McDowell from the Field of Manassas — Victory Dearly Achieved through the Loss of the Lives of so Many Brave Men — Remarks on the Dispersion of Confederate Troops after the Battle — The Large Amount of Fine Artillery, Small Arms, and Ammunition Captured, of Great Benefit — Generals all Content with what had been Done — Allusions to Crossing the Potomac, 102-113.

CHAPTER XII. Reflections on the Victory 114 Confederate States Had no Disciplined Troops, were Inferior as to the Number of, and Excellence of. Arms — Great Disparity in Artillery — The Field very Extensive, Broken, and Wooded — Hulbert, of Connecticut — The Day after the Battle of Manassas — T. K. Fauntleroy, 114-119.

CHAPTER XIII. Responsibility for the Failure to Pursue 120 The President's Letters on the Subject, and General Johnston's and General Beauregard's Replies — General S. Cooper is made Acquainted with Details, 102-137.

CHAPTER XIV. General Johnston's Correspondence 138 After the Battle of Manassas — Confederates Camp in and around Centreville — Matters not Running Smoothly between Generals Johnston and Beauregard at Manassas — The President Snubs General Johnston, Designating His Arguments and Statements Utterly One-sided, and His Insinuations as Unfounded as They are Unbecoming — The Roster of the Generals of the Confederate Army in 1861-62 — Mr. Davis's Letter to Hon. James Lyons, Richmond, Va., 138-158.

CHAPTER XV. The Opposition of Congress to the President. . . 159 The Term of the Provisional Congress about to Close — Newly Elected Members and Senators to be Sworn in — Ships for the Destruction of the Merchant Marine of the United States — Selling Cotton to the Enemy — Stringency of English Cotton Market — Party in Opposition to the Administration — To Give Entertainments or Administer the Government — Hints of His Getting Rich on His Savings — One or Two of the Generals had Their Cliques — Change of Circumstances Made it Impossible at Times to Act on Advice of Congress Committees — He was Abnormally Sensitive to Disapprobation — Wounds an Old Friend Unavoidably, 159-164.

CHAPTER XVI. 'Beauregard's Letter 165 A Period of Inactivity — Foreign Recognition Fully Expected — Mr. Hunter, of Virginia — General Beauregard Mentioned as Possibly Next President — An Estrangement Between Him and the Authorities at Richmond — Correspondence to the Richmond Whig — Generals Cooper and Lee, from the President — General Beauregard's Report on the Battle of Manassas, Commented upon by General Lee — Controversy between General Beauregard and the Secretary of War about this Time — The President to General Beauregard, 172-177, CHAPTER XVII. Roanoke Island — Mr. Davis's Inauguration 178 The Year 1862 — Campaigns of Confederate States Opened Early — A General Reorganization of the Cabinet, March 17th — The Enemy Unusually Active — Capture of Roanoke Island, an Important Outpost of the Confederates, by General Burnside — Captain O. Jennings Wise, of the Richmond Blues, Killed — His Father's Exclamation, 178-179.

CHAPTER XVIII. The Inauguration 180 A Contemporary Account of the Inaugural Ceremony, February 22, 1862 — The President and the Vice-President Elect Received with Hearty Cheers — The Oath Administered to the President by Judge Haliburton, of the Confederate District Court — Mr. Hunter, President of the Senate, proclaimed Mr. Davis President for the Term of Six Years — Mr. Hunter Administered Oath to Vice-President, 180-183.

CHAPTER XIX. Effort to Effect Exchange of Prisoners — Evacuation OF Manassas — Visit to Fredericksburg 184 Early in the War Confederate Government Desired a Free Exchange of Prisoners — Suspension Writ of Habeas Corpus — Martial Law Proclaimed — Extended over City of Richmond and the Adjoining Country for a Distance of Ten Miles — February 2d, General Beauregard Takes Leave of the Army of the Potomac — Instructions to General Johnston — He Began his Retreat March 7th, in Undue Haste, from the Front of McClellan — General Early States Unnecessary Loss at Manassas, 184-189; Correspondence — The President to General Johnston — The President and General Johnston Proceed to Fredericksburg and Make a Reconnaissance — The President Returns to Richmond to Await Further Developments — General Holmes Relieved of his Command and Directed to Report at Richmond — Letters Written by Residents of Fredericksburg, 189-197.

CHAPTER XX. The Executive Mansion — The Hospitals 198 In July, Moved to the "Old Brockenbrough House" — "The Carrara Marble Mantels were the Delight of our Children" — "Lovely Mary Brockenbrough" — "Mrs. James Grant" — Impressed by the Simplicity, Sincerity, and Beauty of the Ladies of Richmond — Clothed and Cared for the Soldiers, and Labored in the Hospitals — Various Interesting Incidents — Mrs. Mary Arnold and Numerous Other Ladies Active in all Good and Patriotic Works — People Rose in Their Might and Met Every Emergency with Self-sacrifice and Reckless Daring — The President's Health Precarious — General Lee and the Silver Saucepan — The Last Part of the War no One had any Delicacies, 198-210.

CHAPTER XXI Emancipation Proclamation 211 Members of the Maryland Legislature Arrested, 1862, under Circumstances of Great Outrage — Lettres de Cachet — Drum-head Courts-martial — Civilians Condemned to Death — President Lincoln's Hopes and Plans — The Act of Confiscation, July 25, 1862 — Slavery Declared Abolished in all States after January First — Confederates are Willing to Have Peace, but not at the Expense of their Constitutional Rights — President Davis's Opinions on the Proclamation — The North Bends its Energies to Subjugating the South — The Condition of Servants — Thousands of Contrabands in Alexandria — Well-dressed Darkies are the Special Aversion of the Volunteers, 211-219.

CHAPTER XXII. Missouri (Monitor) and Virginia (Merrimac) 220 After Disaster Victory again Crowned the Confederates in a Fight that Revolutionized the Art of Naval Warfare — The Evacuation of Norfolk, and Destruction of the Ram Virginia, as she could not be brought up the River — A Captured Flag — It was Damp with Blood — It was Borne to the President by Colonel John Taylor Wood, 220-221.

CHAPTER XXIII. Shiloh, 1862 — Corinth 222 February 4th, General Beauregard at Bowling Green — 6th, Surrender of Fort Henry — 7th, Evacuation of Bowling Green — 16th, Fort Donaldson Fell — The Loss of Forts Henry and Donaldson Opened River Routes to Nashville and North Alabama — General Johnston Writes to President, who Replies — Enemy Commenced Moving up Tennessee River, March 10th — Confederate Force at Corinth — General Bragg on the Battle of Shiloh — When General Johnston Fell, had the Successes of the Confederates been Followed up, Grant and his Army Would have Been Fugitives or Prisoners, 222-232 ; General Polk's Report — Colonel Le Baron's Statement — Colonel McCordle's Statement — Opinion of a Staff Officer — Mr. Davis's Reply to a Letter from a Friend — The Field Return of the Army of Mississippi before the Battle of Shiloh, 233-242 ; April 9th, General Halleck left for Pittsburg Landing — An Advance on Corinth Made by General Grant — Orders to General Bragg — Physicians Certify that General Beauregard is too Old for Active Service — Telegram to General Bragg — Telegram to Secretary Stanton after the Evacuation of Corinth, 243-248.

CHAPTER XXIV. New Orleans 249 Depression at the Loss of Shiloh — The Fall of New Orleans a Terrible Blow — General Butler Inaugurated Ruler of the City — He Hangs Mumford — He is Proclaimed by President Davis a Felon, an Outlaw, and a Common Enemy of Mankind, to be Hanged at Sight — No Commissioned Officer of the United States Taken Captive to be Paroled before Exchanged until Butler Meets with Condign Punishment — Butler's Atrocities Further Denounced, etc., 249-258 ; Butler Denounced in the House of Lords — December 13th, Earl Russell said, etc. — The British Government not Inclined to Offer Mediation between North and South, 258-260.

CHAPTER XXV. YORKTOWN AND WILLIAMSBURG 261 February 27, 1862 — Office of Commanding General — General McClellan's Account of his Movements — The "Formidable Fortifications" at Centreville Consisted of Thirty-one Wooden Guns — Federal Army Transferred to the Peninsula — Confederate Council of War — Instructions to General Johnston — Engagement at Williamsburg — Fifth North Carolina Annihilated — General Early Wounded — Supplies of Every Useful Implement Failing — Burning of all the Cotton in the Country — Form of Certificate Given for Cotton Burned June 10, 1862 — Extract from an Old Newspaper, 261-267.

CHAPTER XXVI. The Gun-boats in the James River — Battle of Seven Pines 268

May 9th, Mr. Davis Determined his Family Should Leave Richmond — Gun-boats Ascending the River — Mr. Davis Baptized — Campaign Begins in Dreadful Earnest — Mr. Davis Sends a Letter to Mrs. Davis, 270-274 ; Writes Again, May 19th — McClellan's Army, 156,838 ; Effectives Present, 105,825 ; Johnston's Effectives, 62,696 ; Under Date, Mr. Davis Writes, ' We are steadily developing for a great battle ' — Sent for General Lee — Johnston Moves Upon the Enemy — Rode out to Meadow Bridge to See the Action Commence — May 31st, Firing in the Direction of Seven Pines — Field of Battle Briefly Described, 275-284 ; Report of General Longstreet Published by the War Department, Washington — Mr. Davis, June 1st, Rode out — Was in Danger of Getting Too Near the Enemy — Confederates in Sore Straits — General Lee in Full Command — A Severe Battle — General Johnston Severely Wounded — Official Reports of Losses, 284-290; Mrs. Johnston Distressed and Watchful — Some Heavy Skirmishes — Cannot Telegraph Without Attracting Attention — The Movements of the Enemy Are Slow — Mississippi Troops Lying in Camp — Jackson on the Move, 291-294.

CHAPTER XXVII. Jackson in the Valley 295 General Jackson Forms a Junction with General Edward Johnston, May 8th — A Panic in Washington — General Ewell Holds Fremont in Check — General Johnston Ties a Bucktail to the Color-lance — General Order, Affixing a Bucktail to the Color Staff of First Maryland — Fremont Defeated at Cross Keys by General Jackson, and General Shields at Fort Republic — The Valley of the Shenandoah Wrested from the Enemy — Description, Personal Appearance of "Stone-wall " Jackson — Brutality ere the Close of the War, 295-300.

CHAPTER XXVIII. Mr. Davis's Literary Preferences 301 One of the Most Disheartening Periods of the War — Evacuation of Norfolk and Destruction of the Virginia — Mr. Davis Reads "Guy Livingston" — His Love of Poetry and His Favorite Authors — Fond of Moore's Melodies, 301-306.

CHAPTER XXIX. Seven Days' Battles Around Richmond 306 Condensed Account by Mr. Davis — Riding from Field of Battle, Seven Pines — Army in Front of Richmond — The Day after General Lee Assumed Command — Modification of Plans — Evidence of General Lee's Fortitude, 306-309 ; Letters from the President to Mrs. Davis, June nth, 13th, 21st, 23d, 25th, July 6th, and 7th, 310-326.

CHAPTER XXX. Foreign Relations — Unjust Discrimination Against Us — Diplomatic Correspondence... 327 Our Representatives in Europe — Announcement, Governments Could not Assume to Judge Between the Combatants — Government of the Confederate States and the British Foreign Office — Dissatisfaction with the Latter — Her Majesty's Government Does not Discriminate Justly — Our Representatives Meet with Rebuffs — Mr. Mason's Communications to Lord John Russell — His Lordship's Replies, 327-346.

CHAPTER XXXI. Memphis, Vicksburg, and Baton Rouge 347 June 7th, Gun-boats Steam Down Tennessee River — Enemy Try to Sink the Arkansas — On 27th Both Federal Fleets Retire — Siege Ended — Battle of Baton Rouge, and Destruction of the Ram Arkansas to Save Her from the Enemy, 347.

CHAPTER XXXII. Confederate Congress— The President's Message — Horace Greeley 348 August 23d, Vote of Thanks by Congress to General J. C. Breckinridge for Gallant Conduct — Several Resolutions Offered in Favor of Conscription — Mr. Foote's Bill for Retaliatory Purposes — Report of the Secretary of the Treasury — Report of the Postmaster-General, 348-354.

CHAPTER XXXIII. Retaliation for Outrages 355 Brutal Orders of General Pope — President Davis's Communications and Orders to General Lee on the Subject, 355-360.

CHAPTER XXXIV. Campaign Against Pope — Second Manassas — Sharpsburg — Fredericksburg 361 General Jackson Sent to Engage General Pope — Enemy Forced to Withdraw — The Career of General Pope, Brief, Boastful, and Disastrous — That of Lee and Jackson, Brilliant, Audacious, and Successful — A Battle Order Lost — After Battle Second Manassas Lee Crosses Potomac and Enters Maryland — Lee at Bay at Sharpsburg — Federal Army, 40,000, Confederate, 14,000 — Confederates Victorious; Passed into Virginia Again — December 13th, Battle of Fredericksburg, 361-365.

CHAPTER XXXV. Visit to Tennessee— Battle of Murfreesboro. . . 366 The President's Letter to Mrs. Davis from Chattanooga, Tenn., December 15th, 366-368.

CHAPTER XXXVI. Introduction to 1863 369 Mr. Davis Oppressed Through Reverses, but Confederates in Hopes of Recognition by England— Complaints from Subjugated States — Andrew Johnson, Governor of Tennessee — Iron-clad Oath Administered — Prisoners of War on Bread and Water — Slaves Driven from Their Homes, or Forced to Work under Bayonet Guard — Order 91 — Members of Congress Elected under Military Government — An Oath Required from All the Residents of the Conquered States — Mr. Lincoln Swore in 1861 to Sustain the Constitution — When the War Closed, Who were the Victors? — Bread Riot — Mr. Davis Addressed and Dispersed the Rioters, 369-376.

CHAPTER XXXVII. Chancellorsville 377 April, 1863, General Hooker Crosses the Rappahannock with 132,000 Men — Lee's Army Numbered 57,000 — General Jackson Suffering from Illness — Battle Begins — Confederates Rush on the Earthworks — General Jackson's Cry in the Field at Every Success — His Officers Fatally Mistaken for the Enemy's Cavalry — Recital of the Terrible Incidents of General Jackson's Death, 2>77~3^2)-

CHAPTER XXXVIII. Gettysburg 384 May, 1863, General Lee's Army Rested Near Fredericksburg — General Hooker's Forces — Lee Began a Movement Culminating in the Battle of Gettysburg — Ewell's Corps Routs General Milroy at Winchester and Captures Prisoners and Stores — The Federal Commander Covers Washington — June 27th, General Lee at Chambersburg — Federal Cavalry First Encountered at Cashtown, July 1st — General Reynolds Killed— Cemetery Hill, Hand to Hand Conflict— The Battle Rages— Mighty Feats of Valor on the Part of Both Combatants — Lee Defeated, but Not Disheartened — The President Sorely Tried — Eulogy on His Army, 384-391.

CHAPTER XXXIX. General Lee's Offer of Resignation 392 General Lee Assumes All the Responsibility of Failure at Gettysburg — His Noble Letter to the President and Offer to Resign his Command — The President's Reply, 392-399.

CHAPTER XL. Vice-President Stephens's Commission to Washington 400 An Attempt to Renew Negotiations with the Federal Government — Letter of Instruction from the President to the Vice-President — Letter of Mr. Davis to President Lincoln, 400-407 ; Mr. Stephens Proceeds to Fortress Monroe under Flag of Truce — Permission to Go to Washington Refused by the Federal Government — The Military Authorities Sufficient to Deal with " the Insurgents " — Report of the Vice-President on the Subject, 407-411.

CHAPTER XLI. Fall of Vicksburg, July 4, 1863 412 Dissatisfaction with the President and his Cabinet — Attention Directed, in January, 1863, to a Campaign with Vicksburg as an Objective Point — General Johnston Ordered, May 9th, to Proceed to Mississippi at Once and Take Chief Command of the Forces — The Enemy Between Jackson and General Pemberton's Force Thirty Miles Away — Pemberton Forced to Retire to Vicksburg — May 18th, Grant Invests the City — Details of the Siege — General Grant Telegraphs to Washington — General Johnston Telegraphs to the Secretary of War — Grant Telegraphs to Halleck "Joe Johnston has postponed his attack " — After Forty-seven Days Vicksburg Falls, July 17th — Johnston Abandons Jackson and Retreats into the Interior, 412-424.

CHAPTER XLII. President Davis's Letter to General Johnston AFTER the Fall of Vicksburg 425 Communication from the President to General Johnston Dated Richmond, July 15, 1863 — The Reasons for Condemning the Course and Conduct of the General Given in Detail — The General's Telegrams, 425-440.

CHAPTER XLIII. Military Operations at Charleston 441 Defence of Charleston the Most Notable Event of the Summer of 1863 — Lack of Diligence on the Part of General Beauregard — July 10th, a Concealed Battery Opened Fire on the Confederate Lines — Answered Briskly — July 18th. Federal Fleet Poured a Terrific Fire into Fort Wagner — After a Furious Cannonade by Sea and Land for Fifty-seven Days, the Fort and Island Evacuated on the Night of September 6th — Sabine Pass — A Confederate Force of Forty- two Men and Two Lieutenants Drives the Whole Federal Fleet out of the Pass, 441-444.

CHAPTER XLIV. Letter to His Holiness, the Pope 445 Mr. Davis's Early Education Prompts Him to Write to Rome and Thank the Pope for His Sympathy — The Pope's Reply — Refers to the Archbishops of New York and New Orleans — Sends His Likeness to Mr. Davis During His Imprisonment, 445-448.

CHAPTER XLV. Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge 449 The Bloody Battle of Chickamauga, August 20th — Brigadier-General William Preston Sent to Mexico to Treat with the New Emperor — Grant's Movements — He Captures Lookout Mountain — Confederates Retreat Toward Tunnel Hill — General Bragg Relieved — General Hardee Assigned the Command of the Army of the West, but Declines to Accept — General Joseph E. Johnston Directed to Take the Command Personally, December 16, 1863, 449-451.

CHAPTER XLVI. Correspondence Between President Davis and Governor Z. B. Vance 452 Treasonable Purposes of Holden, Editor of the Standard — The Case a Grave One — Mr. Davis Begs for Information from Governor Vance — The Latter Replies — Rejoinder of the President — Lincoln Referred to in Severe but Merited Terms, 452-461.

CHAPTER XLVII. The Maryland Line and the Kilpatrick and Dahlgren Raid 462 An Expedition Organized by the Federals, February, 1864 — Crossed Ely's Ford on the 29th, After Surprising and Capturing Picket — At Daylight, March 1st, Marylanders Drove in One of Kilpatrick's Flanking Parties — A Despatch from Dahlgren to Kilpatrick Captured with an Officer and Five Men— Dahlgren Attacks North Side of the City— A Company of Richmond Boys Under Eighteen — Dahlgren Retreats, is Shot Dead, and His Command Captured — General Wade Hampton's Report, 462-465 ; Orders Discovered on the Body of Colonel Dahlgren— Mr. Blair Amused Over the Loss of Life and Suffering, 465-473.

CHAPTER XLVIII. Diplomatic Correspondence 474 Her Britannic Majesty's Government to Observe a Course of Neutrality — Letter to President Davis from Lord Lyons, Legation, Washington— Full Copy of Earl Russell's Instructions — Won't Permit Confederates to Build Ships of War in any British Possession. The Cumberland and the Merrimac — The President's Reply, Proud, Pungent, and Just, 474-482.

CHAPTER XLIX. Fort Pillow, Ocean Pond, and Meridian 483 Generals Forrest and Chalmers Attack Federal Forces Occupying the Fort — April 12, 1864, Captured the Fort After a Fierce Resistance, 14 Confederate Officers and Men were Killed, and 86 Wounded ; Many Federals Taken Prisoners — Generals Finnegan and Colquitt Victorious at Ocean Pond — Expel the Enemy from Florida — February 3d, General Sherman Crosses State of Mississippi to Meridian — Joined by Federal Cavalry from Corinth and Holly Springs — General Forrest Forces Him to Make a Hasty Retreat — General Banks's Attempt to Penetrate Central Texas Fails — Totally Routed, 483-486.

CHAPTER L. Virginia Campaign, 1864 487 Grant's Theory of War — He Takes Command March 17, 1864 — The Army of the Potomac, 141,160 Men — Lee's Entire Effective Strength, 64,000 — May 4th, Grant Begins His March — Lee Gives Him a Blow in the Wilderness — Long- street Wounded in Mistake by His Own Men — Lee's Brave Conduct — Enemy Able to Rally Their Forces and Reform Behind Their Intrenchments — Both Armies Intrenched at Spotsylvania Court House — May 12th, Enemy Made a Heavy Assault — Nearly 3,000 Confederates Taken Prisoners — Eighteen Pieces of Artillery Captured Also, 487-491 ; Grant Moves in the Direction of Hanover Junction on the Night of the 20th — Lee Follows Him — June 3d, the Two Armies Meet at Cold Harbor — 13,000 Men Placed " Hors de Combat" in One Hour — Grant, after this Battle, Moves Toward James River Below Richmond — During the Campaign Grant Reinforced 51,000 Men, Lee, 14,400 — The Federal Commander's Loss from May 4th to June 4th — Mr. Davis Visits General Lee — An Incident on One of the President's Lonely Rides — Confederate Spirit of Devotion — Women and Children in Richmond Suffering for Food — Death from Accident of One of the President's Children — A Sad Household, 491-497.

CHAPTER LL Yellow Tavern — Death of Stuart 498 May 13th, the President Rides Out to the Front — A Line of Skirmishers Near the Yellow Tavern— General Stuart Shot — His Wound Mortal — President Visits His Death-bed — Eulogy on His Character — Burial of the Young Hero, 498-503.

CHAPTER LII. Bombardment of Charleston 504 August 21, 1863, Major-General Gilmore Opened Fire on the City Before the Hour Named by Him — His Object Was to Enforce the Surrender of the City Without Complying with the Honorable Usages of War — His Purpose Was to Reach the Heart of the City and Make it Unhabitable by Non-combatants — Threw Shells Into the City from Time to Time — Confederate Prisoners Held Confined under the Fire of Our Batteries so as to Hinder Our Resistance, 504-507.

CHAPTER LIII.

Battle of Drury's Bluff, May 16, 1864 508 Grant's Plan of Campaign — Butler Ordered to Concentrate His Troops at City Point and Destroy the Railroad Leading to Richmond — Confederate Troops, May 14th, Reach Vicinity of Drury's Bluff — General Robert Ransom's Monograph upon the Battle— Hot Work— Beauregard Censured— A " Solid Shot Struck at the Feet of President Davis" — Butler Retreats to His Lines— General Beauregard's " Memorandum" — The Document Sent to General Bragg with an Endorsement on it by the President, 508-523.

CHAPTER LIV. The Lack of Food and the Prices in the Confederacy 524 The Prisoners from the Northern Army — The Confederates in Northern Prisons — Faithlessness of the Federal Government — In July, 1862, Enormous Quantities of Fractional Notes Issued — The Price of Gold in New York and in the Confederacy, and a List of the Prices of Food and Staples in the Latter — $350 for a Ham, $12 for a Pound of Sugar, etc. —Price Lists — Expenses of an Officer of Artillery en route for Richmond — Bill of Fare at the Oriental, Richmond, 524-535.

CHAPTER LV. Exchange of Prisoners, and Andersonville 536 The Sufferings of the Men of the South on Johnson's Island, and of the Men of the North at Andersonville — The South Hemmed In on All Sides — The "Pens" Stragglers Amusing Themselves in the Rear — Dr. Mann in the August Century — Men Put in Irons — President Davis Writes to President Lincoln —

President Davis, July 20, 1862, in Secret Session, Recommends a Certain Measure to Congress — Agreement as to the Release of Prisoners — On July 23d a Cartel Signed by Major-General Hill and Major-General Dix — The Day After Major-General Dix Directs the Murder of Peaceful Citizens — Mr. Davis Issues a General Order, Recognizing Pope and his Commissioned Officers Robbers — General Lee the Day after Gettysburg — He Writes to General Grant, who Replies, 536-545 — A Despatch from General Grant to General Butler — Mr. Davis writes in Belford's Magazine January and February, 1890 — The Herald's Correspondent — Father Hagan — The Richmond Examiner preaches Retaliation — Mr. Davis Writes to General Crafts I. Wright — Extract from Message to Confederate Congress — Letter from General Grant to General Halleck — Professor Dabney, of the University of Virginia, to the Editor of The Nation — "A Story of Horrors" — " In a Yankee Prison" — Written for the Nashville American by J. B. West — Comparative Mortality of Federal and Confederate Prisons — The New York Tribune Adduces the " Logic of Facts" — The Answer to the Tribune a Curiosity — Mr. Davis Terribly Affected by the Death-rate, 545-574.

CHAPTER LVI. Journey to Charlotte 575 Darkness Closing Over the Confederacy — Mr. Davis's Headquarters to be in the Field, 575 ; Sale of Household Goods — Going Forth into the Unknown, 576 ; Depression upon the City — The Pistol — " You can Force your Assailants to Kill You" — All Night in the Train, 577 ; Hardships of the Journey — Universal Consternation — Mr. A. Weill's Kindness— Established in Charlotte, 578.

CHAPTER LVII. Nearing the End 579 As Hope Died Out in the Breasts of Rank and File, the President's Courage Rose — Calm in the Contemplation of Disaster and Death — Letter to General Lee, 579 ; Siege of Petersburg Hotly Pressed — Battery Gregg — 200 against 5,000 —The Fall of Fort Gregg— Death of General A. P. Hill While Endeavoring to Join his Troops, 580 ; General Lee Telegraphs that he Can no Longer Hold the Lines at Petersburg — Evacuation of Petersburg, 581.

CHAPTER LVIII. The President's Account of the Evacuation of Richmond 582 General Lee's Telegram Handed to Mr. Davis While in Church, Sunday, April 2d — Heads of Departments Assembled, 582 ; Generous Sympathy and Patriotic Impulse —Affection and Confidence of the People — Starting for Danville, 583 ; How Mr. Davis Bore Defeat, 585; Letter of M. H. Clarke to Mrs. Davis, 586-588.

CHAPTER LIX. Surrender of Lee 589 Lee's Army Marching Toward Amelia Court House — Repeated Attacks — The Army Subsists on Young Shoots of Trees and Parched Corn — The Retreat Continued, 589; Attack on the Rear Guard ; Capture of Generals G. W. C. Lee, Ewell, and Anderson, 590 ; Meeting of Generals Grant and Lee — The Interview between Lee and Grant, 592 ; General Lee's Propositions — Terms of the Surrender, 593-594 ; "Uncle Robert, God Help You, General!" — Incident Related by General G. W. C. Lee, 595 ; Major Walthall's Letter, 597.

CHAPTER LX.

Honorable Mention 598 A Glimpse of a Few Gallant Figures, 598 ; The Young " Murat " of the Cavalry, 599 ; A Long List of Gallant Men, 603, 604 ; General Wade Hampton, a Fit Representative of the Chivalry of the South, 604 ; The Meeting of General Lee and His Son on the Bloody Field of Fredericksburg, 605.

CHAPTER LXI. The Washington Artillery of New Orleans . . 606 Death Often Faced — Well-brushed, but Threadbare Uniforms, 606 ; The " Thin Gray Line," 607 ; Commander Wood's Record — Capture of the Reliance, Satellite, and other Vessels — The Atlanta, 608 ; Captain Wilkinson's Deeds —Semmes, Maffitt, Pegram, Maury, Loyal, and Jones — Heros von Borcke — Homage of Confederate Women, 609.

CHAPTER LXII. Leaving Charlotte — The Rumors of Surrender. 610-11 News that Travels Fast — The Treasure Train of the Confederacy, 610 ; " If I have lost my leg and also lost my freedom, I am miserable, indeed " — Calm in the Expectation of Great Woe — Alarms — The Little Bride, 611 ; Announcement Made to Mr. Davis, at Charlotte, of President Lincoln's Assassination, 615 ; Mr. Davis's Telegram to Mr. Harrison — Depressing Disorder — Sacking of Quartermasters and Commissaries' Stores, 616 ; Colonel Moody — Camping Out, 617 ; The Events of a Trying Journey, 618-619.

CHAPTER LXIII The Journey to Greensborough — The Surrender Of Johnston 620
The President and His Party Move to Greensborough — The President's Conference with General Johnston — Mr. Davis's Account, 620-626 ; General Richard Taylor Agrees with General Canby for Surrender of Land and Naval Forces in Mississippi and Alabama, May 8th, 626 ; Surrender and Parole of Forces, 627 ; Wade Hampton's Letter to Mr. Davis, 629-630.

CHAPTER LXIV. Capture of President Davis, as Written by Himself 631 Departure from Charlotte, 631 ; Arrival at Washington, Ga. — Departure of Messrs. Benjamin and Mallory, 632 ; First Positive Information of General Johnston's Surrender — The Company Volunteer to Attend the President, 633 ; Had General Johnston Obeyed Orders, General Sherman Could not have Successfully Pursued Him, 634 ; Better Terms of Surrender Could have been Obtained, 635 ; The Alarm — The Moment of Danger — Colonel Taylor's Escape, 638-639 ; The Many Falsehoods Relating to Mr. Davis's Capture, 640 ; The Mythical Hoopskirt, 641 ; Proclamation of Reward for Mr. Davis's Capture, 642 ; Mr. Davis's Entrance into Captivity — Interview with General Wilson, 643-644.