

Cairnes, J. A. The Slave Power: Its Character, Career, and Probable Designs: Being an Attempt to Explain the Real Issues Involved in the American Contest. New York: Carleton, 1862.

CHAPTER I Introduction—The Case Stated

Causes of the War. — The popular view; — Its superficiality.— Slavery the central problem of American history. — The commercial theory. — The claim of independence : how to be estimated. — Real cause of secession. — True origin of the war obscured by its proximate occasion. — War the only arbitrament — Views of the North : The Unionist sentiment ; The Anti-Slavery sentiment. — Rapid growth of the Anti-Slavery sentiment. — Present aspect of the question 17

CHAPTER II The Economic Basis of Slavery

Different fortunes of slavery in the North and South. — Various explanations of the phenomenon : Theory of diversity of character in the original founders ; Theory of climate and race ; The explanation of climate inadequate ; Alleged indolence of the negro groundless. — True solution of the problem — Economic. — Merits and defects of slave labour. — Merits and defects of free labour. — Comparative efficiency of slave and free labour. — Agricultural capabilities of North and South. — Slave and free products.—Farther conditions essential to the success of slave labour : Fertility of the soil ; Extent of territory.— Exhausting effects of slave culture.— General conclusion 33

CHAPTER III Internal Organization of Slave Societies

Economic success of slavery, in what sense conceded. — Structure of a slave society moulded by its economic conditions. — Agriculture— the sole career for slavery.-- Exigencies of slave agriculture. — Results: Magnitude of plantations ; Indebtedness of planters ; Unequal distribution of wealth. — Waste lands in slave countries. — Social consequences. — The mean whites. — Industrial development of Slave States prematurely arrested. — Net results of slave industry. — Constitution of slave societies essentially oligarchical. — Baneful influence of the slave oligarchy falsely charged on democracy. — Each principle to be tested by its proper fruits.- Character of the Slave Power 46

CHAPTER IV. TENDENCIES OF SLAVE SOCIETIES.

In what direction are slave societies moving? — Importance of the question. — Presumption in favour of modern slavery derived from the experience of ancient. — Three circumstances connected with modern slavery destroy the force of the analogy: I. Difference of race and colour; Its effects. II. Growth of modern commerce ; Its effects : In enhancing the value of crude labour, and thus augmenting the resources of slavery ; In superseding the necessity of education, and thus perpetuating servitude ; Modern slavery extends its despotism to the mind. III. The slave trade : Its two-fold functions in the modern system : In relation to the consuming countries; In relation to the breeding countries. Division of labour between the old and new states ; The slave trade securely founded in the principles of population ; The analogy of cattle breeding 64

CHAPTER V. INTERNAL DEVELOPMENT OF SLAVE SOCIETIES.

Outline of the economy of slave societies. — They include no element of progress. — The mean whites: Growth of regular industry among them a moral impossibility; Consequences of the absence of regular industry; Extreme sparseness of population ; Incompatibility of this with civilized progress. — The slaves and their masters. — Prospects of emancipation in the natural course of internal development: Inherent difficulty of the problem; Modern precedents inapplicable; Economic causes not to be relied on; Political and social motives the real strength of American slavery ; Further support to slavery in the ethics and theology of the South. — Growth of the pro-slavery sentiment. — Its absorbing strength. — Its universality. — Hopelessness of the slave's position. — Social cost of the system. — Terrorism 77

CHAPTER VI. EXTERNAL POLICY OF SLAVE SOCIETY.

Its aggressive character. — Twofold source of the aggressive spirit : The industrial ; The moral. — Tendency of slave society to foster ambition. — Narrow scope for its indulgence. — The extension of slavery — its only resource. — Concentration of aim promoted by antagonism. — Position of the South in the Union, naturally inferior to that of the North. — Compensating forces : The three fifths vote ; Superior capacity in the South for combined action. — Democratic alliance : its basis. — Terms of the bargain. — Twofold motive of southern aggression.— The political motive mainly operative. — True source of this motive. — Relation of the political motive to the federal position of the South 93

CHAPTER VII. THE CAREER OF THE SLAVE POWER

Position of slavery at the Revolution. — Rise of the cotton trade. — Early progress of the planters. — Acquisition of the Louisiana Territory. — Missouri claimed as a slave state. — Motives to territorial aggrandisement. — Importance of Missouri. — Opposition of the North. — The Missouri Compromise. The Seminole War. — Designs upon Texas. — The tactics of aggression. — Views of the annexationists. — Texas annexed. — Mexican war: division of the spoil. — State of parties in 1850. — Designs upon Kansas. — Obstacle presented by the Missouri Compromise. — The Kansas and Nebraska bill : squatter sovereignty. — Kansas thrown open for settlement. — Preparations of the Slave Power. — Invasion of the territory. — The Leavenworth Constitution. — Atrocities of the Border Ruffians. — Reaction : defeat of the Slave Power. — Alarm in the North.— Formation of the Republican party. First trial of strength of the new party. — Hopeful prospects. — Southern policy of "Thorough": I. Revival of the African slave trade; Agitation for reopening the African slave trade ; Importation of slaves actually commenced. II. Perversion of the Constitution ; Claim of protection to slave property throughout the Union; A judicial decision necessary; Reconstruction of the Supreme Court; Dred Scott Case ; Effect of the decision ; Further requirement — a reliable government. — Breach with the Democratic party — Secession. — Apology for Southern aggression. — Aggression of the Slave Power, in what sense defensive. — The apology admits the charge. Attempt of John Brown. — Its place in current history . . 106

CHAPTER VIII. THE DESIGNS OF THE SLAVE POWER.

Essential character of Slave society unchanged by independence. — Inherent vices of the Slave Power intensified by its new position. — Possible conditions of independence : I. Limitation of slavery to its present area ; Results of this plan. II. Territories opened alike to free and slave colonization ; Probable effects. III. Equal partition of the Territories ; Argument by which this scheme is defended ; Paradox involved in this view ; Geographical conditions ignored ; Northern jealousy not a sufficient safeguard ; European intervention still less to be relied on. — Modification of slavery involved in the success of the South. — Probability of a revival of the African Slave Trade. — Irresistible inducements. — The only counter motive. — Presumption from the past. — Public spirit among the Southern party.— Sacrifice of particular to general interests. — Sectional resistance powerless before the exigencies of public policy. — Results . . . 132

CHAPTER IX. GENERAL CONCLUSIONS.

Duty of Europe, neutrality.— Impolicy of intervention. — Obligation to render moral support. — Two modes of settlement equally to be deprecated. Practical issues at the present time: I. Reconstruction of the Union; Subjugation of the South, how far justifiable ; Subjugation of the South, how far practicable ; Reconstruction of the Union, how far expedient ; Necessity of a recourse to despotic expedients ; Plan for dispensing with despotism by reforming Southern society ; The condition of time ignored ; Disturbing effects of immigration. II. Secession under conditions : Two cardinal ends to be kept in view ; Peculiar position of the Border States ; Mr. Lincoln's proposal, its opportuneness; Free cultivators in the Border States; Facilities for incorporation; The line of the Mississippi; The negro question, three conditions to be satisfied. — I. Immediate and wholesale emancipation ; main difficulty of the problem ; The West Indian experiment ; its lesson ; Natural difficulties enhanced in the South ; Impossibility of protecting the negro ; The ' mean whites ; their corrupting Influence. II. Progressive emancipation : Advantage of dealing with the evil in detail ; Facilities offered by society in the Border States ; Operation of natural causes in the more southern states ; Prospects of the ultimate extinction of slavery. 147
